

Declaration upon submission of an electronic academic thesis (dissertation, habilitation) at Ruhr University Bochum

1. Original

I hereby declare that the electronic version of my academic thesis submitted to the university library corresponds to the approved examination copy and formally complies with the provisions of the doctoral regulations / habilitation regulations.

The publication of the dissertation / habilitation thesis has been approved by the doctoral committee / habilitation committee.

Data formats, data carriers and additional data, as well as the number of copies submitted, comply with the doctoral regulations/habilitation regulations and the requirements of the university library. I have checked the submitted electronic academic thesis for completeness and legibility. I undertake to check the online publication for completeness and legibility after it has been processed and made available by the university library.

2. Online availability

Publication by the university library

I hereby irrevocably grant Ruhr University Bochum the non-exclusive (simple) right to reproduce the submitted electronic scientific thesis and the accompanying descriptive data (abstracts and metadata) on its own servers, to store it electronically for an unlimited period of time, to make it publicly available on international data networks and, if necessary, to convert it into another format.

Publication by a publisher (additional publication by the university library): I grant the university library permission to publish my electronic scientific thesis in addition to the publisher's publication.

3. Long-term archiving / conversion to other formats

I irrevocably grant Ruhr University Bochum the right to store the electronic scientific thesis in a long-term archive via the library. Furthermore, it is irrevocably granted the right to convert the electronic scientific thesis, abstracts and metadata into other electronic and physical formats as required (e.g. migration, accessibility, better accessibility, indexing) and to use them in accordance with No. 2, while ensuring that the content is preserved.

4. Transfer to libraries with a national collection mandate

Ruhr University Bochum is irrevocably entitled to transfer the academic thesis, including the associated metadata and abstracts, to the German National Library and other relevant subject-specific or regional document servers with the same rights as mentioned above.

5. Third-party rights

I confirm that the document does not violate any legal regulations, official orders or third-party rights. In particular, I confirm that I am the sole legal owner or have all necessary rights of use. This includes the images (photos, graphic elements) contained in this work. I am responsible for the content of the document to be published.

The publishing person indemnifies Ruhr University Bochum against any claims by third parties. Ruhr University Bochum is entitled to block access to a document if there are concrete indications of an infringement of third-party rights. In such a case, Ruhr University Bochum will inform the publishing person of the blockage without delay, within the scope of its possibilities.

6. Personal data

With the electronic scientific work, the personal data contained therein is made available to the public. The personal data in this declaration is processed for the purpose of managing the publication. Further information on data protection is attached to the declaration.

7. Remuneration

Ruhr University Bochum has no financial interest in publishing this document. The signatory will not receive any remuneration.

8. Rights of revocation

Statutory rights to revoke rights of use that cannot be waived in advance remain explicitly unaffected by the above provisions and are reserved. This applies in particular to the statutory right to revoke rights of use pursuant to Section 42 of the German Copyright Act (UrhG) (right of revocation due to changed conviction).
